

How can the FCC even pretend to have the understanding about internet communications so as to pretend to know what will or will not happen if net neutrality is tampered with , if it is does not even know how to implement a simple I AM NOT A ROBOT filter in their on-line comments/filings page, and when confronted with massive robo-comments filings their only defense is that they cannot possibly review all messages, so all they seem to do is count them

Get up to speed and clean up your act, before trying to regulate things you seem not to understand .1

No wonder scammers laugh at the FCC and we have exploding robocall scams and the “do not call number registrations” have become the source of the list of numbers to call.
